36 Appeal from a judgment of the United States District Court for the Southern District of 37 New York (Woods, J.).

38 UPON DUE CONSIDERATION, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND 39 DECREED that the judgment of the district court is AFFIRMED.<sup>1</sup>

40 Plaintiff-Appellant Aftarn Sanderson appeals from a judgment entered by the United States
41 District Court for the Southern District of New York (Woods, J.), after a jury found that Defend-42 ants Leg Apparel LLC and Aimee Lynn Accessories, Inc. retaliated against him in violation of 43 New York State Human Rights Law and Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 but did not 44 discriminate or retaliate against him in violation of New York City Human Rights Law. On ap-
45 peal, Sanderson contests the district court’s exclusion of statements by his physicians and a report
46 by the New York State Division of Human Rights. He also contends that the district court abused
47 its discretion by allowing Defendants to “unduly” and “constantly” object during his cross-exam-
48 ination of witnesses. Appellant’s Br. 28–30. We assume the parties’ familiarity with the un-49 derlying facts, the procedural history of the case, and the issues on appeal, which we reference 50 only as necessary to explain our decision to AFFIRM.

51 I. Exclusion of Evidence

52 We review the district court’s challenged evidentiary rulings for abuse of discretion.
53 Boyce v. Soundview Tech. Grp., Inc., 464 F.3d 376, 385 (2d Cir. 2006). Even if a district court
54 excludes evidence, we will not modify or disturb a judgment if the error was harmless. See Fed 55 R. Civ. P. 61; Fed. R. Evid. 103(a); Warren v. Pataki, 823 F.3d 125, 138 (2d Cir. 2016). “In civil

1 cases, the burden falls on the appellant to show that the error was not harmless.” MacDermid
2 Printing Sols. LLC v. Cortron Corp., 833 F.3d 172, 189 (2d Cir. 2016) (citations omitted).

3 Sanderson first argues that he should have been permitted to introduce evidence of his 4 doctors’ statements pursuant to Federal Rules of Evidence 803(4) and 807. But Rule 803(4) does 5 not open the door to all out-of-court statements made by doctors or medical providers; to the con-6 trary, the rule applies only to statements made by or derived from the individual seeking medical 7 attention. See, e.g., Grabin v. Marymount Manhattan Coll., 659 F. App’x 7, 10 (2d Cir. 2016)
8 (summary order); Field v. Trigg Cnty. Hosp., Inc., 386 F.3d 729, 735–36 (6th Cir. 2004); Bombard
9 v. Fort Wayne Newspapers, Inc., 92 F.3d 560, 564 (7th Cir. 1996); Stull v. Fuqua Indus., Inc., 906
10 F.2d 1271, 1273–74 (8th Cir. 1990); Bulthuis v. Rexall Corp., 789 F.2d 1315, 1316 (9th Cir. 1985).
11 Likewise, Rule 807 applies only if the statement “is more probative on the point for which it is 12 offered than any other evidence that the proponent can obtain through reasonable efforts.” Fed.
13 R. Evid. 807(a)(2). Here, Sanderson never demonstrated that he undertook reasonable efforts to 14 obtain the testimony of his medical providers. In addition, Sanderson argues that the district court
15 erred in excluding a report of the New York State Division of Human Rights regarding his claims
16 against Defendants. But Sanderson does not explain how the exclusion of this evidence preju-17 diced him, and we decline to “manufacture” this argument for him. LoSacco v. City of Mid-
18 dletown, 71 F.3d 88, 93 (2d Cir.1995).

19 II. Sanderson’s Cross Examination of Witnesses

20 Sanderson next contends the district court abused its discretion by sustaining numerous 21 objections during his cross-examination of witnesses, preventing him from litigating his case ef-
22 fectively. District courts must exercise “reasonable control over the mode and order of examin-23 ing witnesses” to “make those procedures effective for determining the truth,” “avoid wasting

1 time,” and “protect witnesses from harassment or undue embarrassment.” Fed. R. Evid. 611(a).
2 Accordingly, a district court has “wide latitude . . . to impose reasonable limits on cross-examina-
3 tion based on concerns about, among other things, . . . interrogation that is repetitive or only mar-
4 ginally relevant.” Delaware v. Van Arsdall, 475 U.S. 673, 679 (1986); see also Manley v. Am-
5 Base Corp., 337 F.3d 237, 247 (2d Cir. 2003) (same).

6 The district court did not abuse its discretion in allowing Sanderson to be interrupted during 7 his cross-examination. Despite repeated warnings from the district court, Sanderson’s pro se 8 cross-examinations were often interspersed with lengthy soliloquies. At other times, he argued 9 with the witness’s recollection or responded with his own conclusions. The district court appro-
10 priately allowed opposing counsel to object and interrupt Sanderson’s cross-examination when it
11 was clear that he was impermissibly using his questions as a vehicle to testify or argue. See, e.g., 12 Dallal v. N.Y. Times Co., 352 F. App’x 508, 512 (2d Cir. 2009) (summary order) (concluding that 13 the district court “reasonably addressed plaintiff’s occasionally argumentative style of question-
14 ing”); cf. United States v. Gayle, 406 F. App’x 352, 363 (11th Cir. 2010) (determining that a district 15 court properly “cut off . . . objectionable questioning” to caution counsel “about crossing a line 16 between leading questions and ‘oratory’”). In so doing, the district court did not deprive Sand-
17 erson of the chance to cross-examine witnesses—in fact, it often let Sanderson proceed to a ques-
18 tion over a valid objection. The district court was therefore well within its discretion in managing 19 Sanderson’s cross-examination.
